Key selling points:

- Of Scott's 100+ films, 60 of them were westerns
- In the early 1950s, Scott was consistently in the Top 10 of actors generating box office draw
- 2 of the films were directed by Andre De Toth who was known for his noir style in the Western genre through the 1950s
- Desperadoes was Columbia's first Technicolor feature!
- Tennessee Ernie Ford was brought in for one brief scene to sing the title song for Man in the Saddle. He was, at this time, a new and relatively unknown singer. This was his first film appearance.
